Welcome to the Innovation in HIV Therapeutics - Europe/North American Forum!

Long-acting antiretrovirals are no longer just part of the future pipeline, but available for treatment and prevention. This scientific program aims to equip HIV-treating clinicians, pharmacologists, and virologists with the latest information on first-generation injectables to best inform prescribing & advice for people living with, or at risk of HIV. We also look to the future to explore novel agents and technologies on the horizon and the role they might play in achieving global targets for HIV care and the elimination of new transmissions.

New advances mean little if they don't reach the people who need them, so there is a major focus on implementation - including real-world experience.

This one-day virtual meeting brings together experts in the field to share knowledge and experience from Europe and North America.

On behalf of the Program Chairs,

Laura Waters and Anton Pozniak
